RE:People v Yablonsky FVI900518

Dear Mike;

For the record sir. When the state filed original charges they filed only murder charges, without enhancements of rape. It was not until statements by my first wife who lied about the incident in Texas saying that I had been charged with rape and convicted. As stated before those charges were never filed and depositions made stating those charges were in fact false!

The state foiled an amended complaint suggesting this case involved a rape, asking for the death penalty. The judge stated there was no evidence to support a rape, but allowed the case to stand as murder with special allegations of attempted rape, probably because he too seen the sex was older than the murder by 1½ to several days than the murder itself.

The jury found true that this murder was committed and added special allegations of attempted rape, also because the DNA tyo this case was not part of the murder. Allowing them to deliberate that I "may" have come back days later and killed her while trying to have sex with her again, only that time was without permission.....allegedly.

Let me also be very clear that my relationship with Rita was mutual and consensual on both sides. It started as an affair while I lived behind her house with my wife. Then continued after I moved away for about three or four months. It was not an everyday event, Everyweek event. But occurred randomly and spuratically without any planning.....as was the last time I was with her.

The last time I was with Rita there was another lady who was blonde, and I was invited into a threesome. I did not deny or refuse that offer. It was the last time I was with Rita. I do not know that lady's name, and cannot recall what she looked like back then outside her being blonde and large busted.

The DNA on the desk blotter will prove this. I had both of them on that desk as the other saddled from behind sitting at the dining table, pushing me into the other. But they both switched places on that desk. Both their DNA's will be on that desk and obviously the blotter. I cannot say how the blotter got into the bedroom three days later. Who knows.

My father knows of a woman who knew of Rita's bragging about being with me before she had been killed. If called he will give you the phone number to Henrieta, or Harriot.

Like stated before the DNA result they used was not 100% and had several numbers different. I tried to get the attorney to point that out but he refused to. Who knows why. Especially when the DNA experts stated that if there was one number different than that was not a match. There was at least three numbers different, or more. I will try to find the results.

Respectfully

p.s. On another note. I filed the bar complaints while Scotts wife mailed them with full copies of your review petition which I referred to in the complaint. I also sent demands for discovery from Denton and Love. Making the connection of Sgt Holmes to VIKINGS and Hamby case. I sent you a copy of that.
