Dear Mike;

Please accept my condolences for your wife's illness. I am very sorry you are made to suffer these. Life is short, precious, and invaluable.

It is a hard issue to have to deal with, as I have family who was made to suffer these same complications. I am asking that you postpone "all" efforts with regards to my situation until your wife finds normalcy and recovery for your wife.

I will maintain my efforts with Scott, since our commitment cannot be delayed. I will withhold all communications until you have informed that you are capable of returning back without interference of hardships

I often think of how life seems to attack those who have worked all their lives, been generous, and played by all the rules, more than it does with those whose practices in life were less desirable. Possibly because our maker thinks more of those whose strengths can endure them. I will have to ask him when I get there, about this.

I wish your wife the strengths and abilities to overcome such hardships, and that you my friend are well.

Respectfully

John Henry
